

Church in politics. Oct 2017.

Theocratic regimes are often controlled by power-hungry men who oppress their population under the guise of religion. In the US, the evangelical tradition has become identified with right wing politics, which are very far from J teachings.

The us has laws that separate church and state. Canada does not offer seats to church leaders, in the upper house, like they do in Britain.

On the other, had I don't see how we can influence social policy and law-making unless we involved and try to get a seat in parliament